Ans — The Emperor and the Old Man

A Japanese emperor had a set of twenty flowerpots. It was the finest collection of its kind in the world. The emperor was very proud of the rare collection. One day, one of the officers of the Emperor broke a flowerpot by accident. The Emperor was very angry. He passed death sentence on the officer. But before the man was put to death, an old man came to know about it. He went to the Emperor's court and said, "I know the art of repairing a broken flowerpot. Once I have repaired it, it will look its original self."

The Emperor felt very happy to hear the claim of the old man. He showed the old man the collection of his flowerpots. He said, "Here are nineteen flowerpots. One flowerpot from the set of twenty is broken. Repair the broken flowerpot and I'll pay you whatever you ask for." The old man raised his stick and broke all the nineteen flowerpots. The emperor was red with anger. He cried out, "You idiot! What have you done?" The old man coolly replied, "I have done my duty. Each of these flowerpots would have taken one human life. Now you can take only one life, and that is mine." The old man's wisdom and boldness pleased the Emperor. He forgave the old man and the officer, too.

Importance of Tree Plantation.

by — Mohit

Trees are important to us. They give us innumerable things. They purify air without which we cannot imagine existing. But man has thoughtlessly cut down forests and other trees his selfish needs. This has resulted in an imbalance of the environment. Lack of trees makes air impure. Hence it is high time to understand the worth of our forests and avoid cutting them. We should also encourage tree plantation. "Grow more trees" should be our motto. We can save our life from dangerous consequences by planting more and more trees. It is also necessary to spread awareness among common people. People should be motivated to realise the importance of tree plantation. Let us take a pledge to plant ~~so~~ trees in more and more numbers and promote others for this noble cause.
